17. Commentary Of Prospects

The revenue in Q4 continued to be restricted by the availability of capacity in the foundry partners though the backlog was 3-4 times larger. The booking is still growing, a sign of continuous strong demand of chips. There are some signs of capacity easing in some of the foundries and hopefully, the Group will ship more chips in FY2023. There are more design projects in Q4 and the Group sees continuous growth in FY2023. As such, the Group is working on diversifying the production of chips into more foundries to ensure the orders are fulfilled timely.

There are three areas of growth in the design in of the chips: automotive, wireless communication and artificial intelligence (AI) chips. The complexity of these chips demand for 14nm and 7nm and third generation semiconductor process technologies. The Group is actively engaging in designing in advance process technologies.
