The decreased in revenue is mainly from the Central region mainly due to overall market conditions.

B3. Current financial year's prospects

In their latest quarterly report in April 2023, the IMF projected the world economy to drop from 3.4 percent in 2022 to 2.8 percent for 2023. Following through from 2022, the outlook is still uncertain amidst financial sector turmoil, lingering high inflation, negative impacts of the Ukraine war and the past three years of the COVID pandemic. A strong rebound from the re-opening of China's economy in end April 2023, the unwinding of the global supply chain disruptions and the easing of energy and food supply are expected to drive the gradual improvement in the global economy going forward in 2023 and 2024.

The spillovers effects from the Chinese economic recovery invigorating the RCEP economic region is expected to stimulate Malaysia's exports of agro resources such as palm oil, electrical and electronic goods and the tourism industry. The manufacturing sector is expected to sustain a moderate recovery in the coming period in addition to a more vigorous and active domestic demand. Construction activities continued to be underpinned by multiyear infrastructural ongoing projects as well as new projects earmarked in Budget 2023. The demand for the Group's goods and services in the various sectors of the economy will be positively sustained going forward.

The Malaysian government don't foresee the economy slipping into a recession, albeit a slower growth, with inflation and living costs weighing on a slower domestic spending. The quarterly growth for the period 1st Jan-31st March 2023 is expected at 4.5-5.0 percent .An annualized growth of 4.5 percent for Malaysia was projected by the IMF.

Against global geopolitical uncertainties and risks such as potential hot wars, unabated inflation, financial turmoil, environmental disasters, the risks to this outlook are tilted to the downside. However against these challenging headwinds, the Group is cautiously optimistic of maintaining a profitable outcome for the quarters going forward.
